Every two years, the World Monuments Watch calls attention to heritage sites around the globe in need of help. The 2012 Watch includes 67 sites from 41 countries and territories. People in these places are working to use the past to build a better future.

Saving Places
Rum Orphanage in Turkey has been abandoned for almost 50 years. It is one of the largest wooden buildings in Europe and plans are being made to restore it.

Connecting to History
Tiantai An in China is over 1,000 years old. This small Buddhist temple has survived wars and earthquakes, and a university is working to tell its important story about the past.

Preserving Traditions
The community of Cour Royale de Tiébélé in Burkina Faso is working to preserve the Kassena cultural tradition of decorating their earthen buildings.

Building Communities
The Fishing Villages of Ha Long Bay in Viet Nam are adapting to environmental changes and tourism, while working to preserve their traditional lifestyle.
